Vincent Van Gogh

Van Gogh belonged to both Dutch and French art, he is ranked among the post-impressionists, and at the same time he remains an artist unlike anyone else.

"Starry Night"

The author managed to separate the sky from the Earth. It seems that active movement in the sky has no effect on what is happening on earth. Below is a sleepy town, ready to fall asleep peacefully. Above - powerful streams, huge stars and incessant movement. The combination of rich blue and yellow colors, a well-known heraldic combination, creates a special atmosphere, fascinates and attracts attention to work. Today, this work has become one of Van Gogh's most recognizable works.

"Girl in white"

This is one of the most heartfelt and beautiful paintings by the artist. The girl's fragile body, her long thin arms with large disproportionate hands, drooping shoulders, the absent-minded look of big eyes - all this conveys a feeling of longing. And although the tender greenery of summer is spread out around the heroine, she stands among the ears of wheat, as if abandoned by everyone, the lonely spirit of the fields.

"Potato eaters"

In this work there is not that riot of colors that is present in many of the author's works. In front of us, in the dim light of a kerosene lamp, are people at a table. In front of them is a dish with baked potatoes, and a cup of barley coffee is the only "luxury" that the peasants can afford.

"Wheat Field with Crows"

The field, stretching all the way to the horizon, connects with the frightening sky, covered with rushing black clouds. A couple of white clouds disappear under the onslaught of such force. This makes the plot more threatening. The painting "Wheat field with crows" is legendary because it was considered the last work of the author.
